YOUTSEY ON GOEBEL'S MURDER

SAYS HE CLEARED THEWAY FOR JIM HOWARD TO SHOOT.

Pointed Out Goebel to Howard and Then Ran Away-He Made a Confession to Gov. Beekham, but Got No Promise of Commutation of His late Sentence.

FRANKPORT, Ky., April 16.-Henry S. outsey, who is serving a life sentence for the der of William Goebel and who, according to his statement, laid the plans for the der, made his first statement to-day on the witness stand in the trial of Jim Howard, the principal in the murder, whom Youtsey charges with being the man behind

Youtsey testified that he had first made his statement to Dr. Hugh Tobin, the prison physician, after the other alleged con-spirators had cut off all communication with him. He later sent for Gov. Beckham and told him that he wanted to make Youtsey said that James Andrew Scott, attorney for Howard, had offered him $35,000 from the Goebel reward fund for seven convictions. Scott said:

"Say nothing of this to Commonwealth Attorney Franklin."
Youtsey further said that Franklin had offered him no promise of pardon or commutation. nor had any one.
He testified that a plan had been prestously made to kill Goebel. Dr. W. R. Jehnson of Jackson county offered to do the killing. Assistant Secretary of State Davidson, under Powers, gave the use of the private office of the Secretary of State for that purpose. Johnson said he would kill Goebel as he came from the Senate chamber. Johnson failed and he said he knew that Johnson would seek another epportunity to kill Goebel.
Youtsey said:

"I first saw Jim Howard, the defendant, on Jan. 30, 1900, a few minutes before 11 o'clock. He rapped on the door of my office and presented a letter which I had addressed to him several days before at the instance of Gov. Taylor. I asked him if he wanted to see Taylor. He answered that he did not want to see any one. I took him to the private door of the Secretary of State's office, leaving him in the hallway. I went into the Secretary of State's general room and from there into the private office. There I closed the door, pulled down the window blinds, raised the corner window and then let Howard into the room through the private doorway.

"I showed him a Marlin rifle and a Winchester rifle and explained to him that I knew the Marlin and that it would shoot a steel ball through fifteen inches of wood.

"Howard sat down and examined the rifles. While he was doing this I fixed the lower window, that was open, and placed some books there. I came up to the window and saw Goebel just in front of the Capitol grounds shaking hands. 'Here he comes,' I said to Howard.

"Is that him?' asked Howard.

"Is that him?' asked Howard.

"I turned and left the room just as he laid out a big pistol on the window ledge. I went down the basement steps and as I got half way down I heard the rifle crack.

"As I got in there my pistol dropped to the floor and I picked it up. I saw Gov. Taylor, Bruce Mathewa, George Hemphill. Ben Rowe and others in there. Taylor was greatly excited. He went to the door leading to Powers's office and turned the knob. Ben Rowe took a lump of coal and began to best on the door. Mathews ran out and got a ladder and ellimbed over the transom and into the private office and opened the door. I did not go into that room."

Youtsey testified that he had feigned the fit in his trial and heard all of the testimony introduced as he lay on the cot. He had not advised his attorneys about his plan. He said:

Youtsey said he was never before in any trouble. He had followed Gov. Taylor as a soldier follows a military general and thought the pardoning power was behind him.

"I'we read ancient history," said Tim,
"but I never heard of Achilles wearing a coat of mail. You'd both better come along to the searching room."

Tim was assisted by two customs inspectors in disrobing Achilles and his brother.
When they were divested of their shirts the customs men made an interesting discovery. Each wore a tight-fitting garment of blue checked pattern. Each garment had forty-sight pockets. In almost every pocket was a silver watch. Besides ninsty watches the garments accommodated about $1,000 worth of diamonds.

Tim stuck to his knowledge of history and made Achilles take off his shoes, but found nothing suspicious about his heel.

The brothers were taken before United States Commissioner Edward Russ in Hoboken and held for examination. They had formerly been employed by a big watch manufacturing concern in Ansonia, Conn., they said, and had gone abroad for the jewelry they had tried to smuggle, with the intention of disposing of it in the Italian quarter in this city.

The inspectors last night caught two callors, Francesco Matteo and Pasquale Galuccio, coming off the ship with $500 worth of silk shawls and handkerchiefs hidden in their trousers. They were arrested and taken to Police Headquarters.

MIGHT INDUCE SOMEBODY TO BUILD 1,000-TON BARGES.

a Penalty for "Neglecting" the Canal, New York Handles One-third of the Expert Grain From Atlantic Ports
-How Pacific and Guif Ports Grow.

The growing importance of the progressive ports of the Pacific Coast and the Gulf is quite forgotten by the advocates of the $100,000,000 canal, who have committed to memory the false theory that New York is losing its commercial eminence because of the poor, neglected canal.

Their premise is that the grain for export, which is and always will be the body of the canal business, is diverted to other ports from New York because the canal doesn't prove to be a cheap method of transportation.

They might point out, too, that Philadel phia is the only Atlantic port which showed a gain last year in the percentage of the export trade from the United States and that its increased percentage was fractional. They might show that Newport News had not so large a percentage last year as in 1900 and that the ports which are advancing in the percentage tables are New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco and those in Puget Sound. Does the Erie Canal enter into competition for the wheat and corn that go from the Pacific or from the Gulf ports?

Of the wheat and corn shipped abroafrom Atlantic ports last year one-third, more than 30,000,000 bushels, cleared from the port of New York. Baltimore came second with 21,000,000 bushels, yet Baltimore cames more's percentage of the export trade has fallen every year, being almost 2 per cent. of the total less in 1902 than in 1901.

fallen every year, being almost 2 per cent. of the total less in 1902 than in 1901.

New Orleans has come to be so great a shipping port for grain that it beat Boston by 7,000,000 bushels last year in its exports of wheat, and equalled Baltimore in shipments of wheat and corn together.

From Puget Sound almost 14,000,000 bushels of wheat more than Boston shipped were sent across the Pacific. San Francisco sent only 1,000,000 bushels less than Baltimore, and Willamette, with 12,500,000 bushels of wheat, distanced Philadelphia. From Galveston 10,000,000 bushels of wheat went abroad, or 4,000,000 bushels more than Newport News cleared.

Of course, when New York State has a canal deepened by $101,000,000 of money raised by taxation the 1,000-ton barges will carry all the grain, if the shippers can be induced to pay handling charges at Buffalo and terminal charges at New York, and if some one will build the barges and take the chance of profit at the competing rates which the railroads can make with the constantly reducing cost of rail transportation.

It has been suggested that Gov. Odell's the constantly reducing cost of rail transportation.

It has been suggested that Gov. Odell's Hudson River steamboat line might go into the 1,000-ton barge trade and be able to get dock facilities in New York at a nice reduction. Since the city of New York now pays a subsidy in taxes of $1.28 a ton for all the freight that comes to the Hudson River by canal, a proposition to subsidize the Hudson River steamboat company may be looked for in case the people vote to apply the scheme of the Davis bill.

Last year the State could have carried all the canal freight over the New York Central's tracks, paid for the work and saved $1,164,000.

that a part of the "returning" railway cur-rents generated at the Kent avenue power station, in Brooklyn, passed by way of the Brooklyn Bridge to the elevated structure at the Manhattan end and down to the water and gas pipes beneath Park row. By means of various tests he has lately found that these currents stray north east in curved streams as far as Twentythird street and by means of the new East River bridge eventually return to the power house in Brooklyn.

Their strengths vary. In the rush hour, when the power house is generating particularly fast, a stray current that passes at the foot of East Twenty-first street, between a pipe connecting with the gas mains and the river, is 1.2 volts. A 12-inch pipe near Grand street is charged to the extent of 5.9 ampères; upon a 20-inch main near Canal street 6 ampères is found flowing north.

In many cases, Mr. Knudson said, these traying currents do little appreciable harm. In others they do a great deal by rotting the pipes and mains by electrolysis On July 14, 1899, for example, this process caused the bursting of an 8-inch water main in Flushing avenue; while pipes are not infrequently exhumed deeply furrowed The stray currents, he concluded, could be stopped by the use of the "double trolley."

WAR MADE ON CAR ROWDIES. Twenty-two Young Men Arrested Yesterday.

Twenty-two young men who it is said for weeks have made the morning trip across Brooklyn Bridge something to be dreaded were caught yesterday in a bunch and carried back to Brooklyn as captives in the same car in which they had indulged in their usual morning fracas.

The twenty-two prisoners, the oldest of whom was 22 years old, are known as the "Ridgewood gang," because they all live in the Ridgewood district of Brooklyn, travel together on the same Bridge car every morning. Together with them were taken three young men who had tried to climb up a ladder to get entrance to a car before others could enter. Magistrate O'Reilly held three of the gang, who were accused of being the ringleaders, in $200 bail each for examination. They are William Speckman, 17 years old, of 614 Myrtle avenue; Ernest Goeble, 17 years old, of 200 Stockholm street, and Henry Strumpler, 22 years old, of 1494 De Kalb avenue. The three young men who had tried to enter a car by ladder are William Schulty, 16, of 200 Forty-fourth street; Jacob M. The Western Section of the Alliance of Reformed Churches approves of a conference of representatives of all religious bodies, and expresses its earnest hope that some plan may be inaugurated by which marriage relations may be held more sacred and divorce made more difficult, and the laws of the country on both subjects may become more uniform and in harmony with divine law. The Western Section therefore bids godspeed to the movement, and pledges most earnest and hearty cooperation. In this expression we feel certain that we are voicing the sentiments of the Presbyterian and Reformed churches, which we represent A committee was named to represent the alliance at the proposed interdenomi-national conference, to secure joint action of all religious bodies to influence legis-lation for uniform laws on marriage and lation for uniform laws on marriage and divorce.

The new pedagogy, and especially instruction in it in theological seminaries, met with small favor in the debates, although a report upon the subject seemed favorable to it. Incidentally, although not by name, the Chicago movement in behalf of more scientific instruction in Sunday schools was hit. The Rev. Dr. James A. Worden, superintendent of Presbyterian Sunday school work, said:

"These men are continually crying, 'Use scientific methods in training children.' The fact is they do not know the first principles of Sunday school works. They are not practical Sunday school works."

Prof. William B. Greene, Jr., of Princeton said: "I believe the public school and the Sunday school are in serious danger from the teaching of this unscientific and unpsychological thing."

Secretary Phillips of the Southern Presbyterian Church compared the new pedagogic teaching to the wooden horse filled with soldiers drawn up before Troy, and advised much further investigation before the new teaching is accepted.

Reports were made of efforts toward denominational union, both at home and in the mission fields.

The Rev. Dr. H. E. Cobb, president of the Reformed Church Union, welcomed the guests and read this letter from President Roosevelt:

WHITH HOUSE, WASHINGTON.)

MY DEAR DR. COBE: Permit me, through you, to express my great regret that my absence in the West will prevent my attending the meeting of the alliance and through you to greet most warmly the delegates and nembers present. Coming as I do from a line of people who have worshipped in the Dutch Reformed Church since the days when the first straggling settlements were growing up along the Hudson, and being at present an attendant of the closely allied German Reformed Church—there being no Dutch Reformed Church—there being no Dutch Reformed Church in Washington—I feel a peculiar interest in your meeting. Sincerely yours.

Other letters of regret were read from President Woodrow Wilson and the Rev. Dr. Patton of Princeton. The Rev. Dr. William Cavan, president of Knox College, Toronto, the Rev. Dr. Robert Kerr of Richmond, Va., and the Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe spoke.

After Mrs. Lockwood secured her divorce in 1886 she opened a boarding house and Walter Carr became one of her boarders. He is a retired broker.
